Welcome Comment

Good morning Year 5!

The start of another week already! I hope that you have had a relaxing weekend and are ready to get cracking this morning.

To get yourself started, why don't you have a look at Go Noodle. You might be feeling like a high energy activity or might try something more reflective like a guided meditation. See what you fancy doing and go for it! 😊

English Task

On Friday, I asked you to read chapters 25, 26 and 27. The questions below are linked to those chapters. Don't forget to answer in full sentences and use the text to support your answers.

- 1.) Why do you think the smoke is described as 'ugly'?
- 2.) Why is Katherine sad when there's nothing left to be fixed?
- 3.) Why did Doc Hawthorne's head smell of onions?
- 4.) What happens to Green Lake after Sam's death?
- 5.) What is Hector's real name?

Maths Task

We are going to have a go at some more problems this week! So today we are starting with Magic Squares. Read the problem carefully (available on the school website in our resources) and have a go. If you are finding it tricky, have a look at the 'simplifications' section and if you are finding it easy or fancy something a bit trickier, have a look at the 'challenge' section! Good luck! 😊

Foundation Subject Task

Miss D has set a family 'Reading Challenge' for you today. Your challenge is to create a reading den. Reading dens are special spaces to curl up with a book. They don't need to be permanent – in fact temporary dens, built from household objects are best! There are loads of different ways to make one. You could use a rug, sheet or even a pile of cushions to create a cubbyhole in an unexpected place. You could turn a huge cardboard box into a reading castle, or drape a rug or sheet over a washing line to create a reading tent. Small children can even snuggle up under an umbrella on a rug. To turn a den into a reading den, just add cushions, blankets... and books! You might create some reading inspired art work to add a finishing touch. When it is finished, sit down to read one or two books together as a reward for your hard work. Don't forget to send over your photos and we will choose some of the best ones to put on the school website. Happy den building!

Any Further Guidance

Thank you, Year 5, for all of your hard work. I know that Mr Salisbury has enjoyed hearing from you, make sure you stay in touch with us. I am making sure that I am seeing the work that you are sending too and Mr S is keeping me very well updated! Also, there is a new Worcestershire Virtual School Games Challenge to take part in! Have a look at our whole school resources, staying active section to find out exactly what you need to do! Keep up the fab work, Take care, Miss McGowan 😊
